How Ben Hathaway Met the Financial Crisis.

(Original.)

Steven Hathaway, head of the firm of Hathaway & Co., importers, desired that his son, aged seventeen, should succeed him in his business. Wishing, however, that he should be properly educated, he sent the boy to college. Before he left the father said to him:

"Ben, since you are to take my place in the business, I wish you to choose elective studies that will be of benefit to you in mercantile pursuits, such as political economy and kindred subjects. Since your life will be devoted to peaceful work I trust you will not spend much time on athletics. You will have no opportunity in business to display your muscle."

Ben went to college; but, having more taste for games than books, he graduated at the foot of his class in studies and at the head in athletics. He was celebrated in his time as right tackle in the football games and on several occasions turned an ignominious defeat into a brilliant victory. When he went home his father was by no means pleased with his son's record, but made the most of what he considered a failure and turned the boy into his counting room.

It was not long after this that the financial panic of 1907 came on, and every one was scrambling for ready cash to meet his obligations. Steven Hathaway exerted every means to keep the firm on its feet, but it was a long pull and a hard pull, and before the finish the old man was well nigh exhausted.

One day Ethan Bull of the firm of Lyon & Bull came into the office of Hathaway & Co. and demanded payment of $10,000 due his firm. When Mr. Hathaway senior begged for time, Bull stormed and blustered, threatening to put the firm into bankruptcy if the money was not paid within twenty-four hours. He left, saying that he would call the next day before bank closing and that if he did not receive a check for the whole amount he would execute his threat.

That night the head of the house of Hathaway & Co. went home physically and mentally in collapse. Ben went with him, put him to bed, sent for a doctor, and when he came asked him to forbid the invalid to go back to his office for several weeks at least. The doctor complied, and Ben breathed easier.

The next morning Ben walked into the office and announced that he would fill his father's place as manager. This did not lessen the dread with which the office force looked upon the situation, for the young man had never managed any business, certainly not in such trying times. It happened to be the worst day of the money squeeze. One hundred and fifty per cent was bid for money, and none to be had. About 2 o'clock, when securities on the stock market were crumbling and ruin stared everybody but tramps and beggars in the face, Mr. Bull walked into the counting room.

He stood six feet one, weighed 200 pounds and had a neck like his namesake. Ben knew well enough that his object had been and was to frighten his father into straining every nerve to raise the means with which to pay his account. The expression of the creditor's face was like that on Japanese images of their god of war.

"Where's Mr. Hathaway?" he asked in stentorian tones.

"I'm Mr. Hathaway," said Ben, rising from his father's desk and advancing, with a pleasant smile. "I suppose you have called, Mr. Bull, for your account. I regret that owing to the locking up—"

"I want my money," roared Bull. "and if I don't get it I'll pull this house down on your heads."

Before the last word was out Ben had tackled him, and in an instant he was on the floor.

"One down!" said Ben. Bull got up and, with redhot blood in his eyes, went for his assailant. In another moment he had resumed his place on the floor. This time his fall was aggravated by Ben's falling with all his weight on top of him.

"Two downs!" cried Hathaway junior, disengaging himself and jumping up.

Mr. Bull took more time than before to get up, but when on his feet made a drive at Ben with his right which, had Ben been there, would have hurt him. Without waiting for a second drive Ben gave his enemy his fist and landed him again on the floor. Then, jumping on him, he held him down.

"Three downs!" he said.

His enemy made a few feeble attempts to rise, then lay still.

"See here, Mr. Bull," said Ben, "if you'll promise to leave this office peacefully I'll let you up."

"Yes, I'll leave this office," panted the prostrate man, "and I'll go straight to my lawyers, and this firm will have a receiver right off."

"In that case you may get your money in a few months or a few years, but there will be another account you'll have to settle with me as soon as the papers are served. I'll give you a thrashing compared with which this will be a passing zephyr. Get up!"

BARGAINS AT ANY TIME

467 Commercial Street

Ben jumped off him nimbly. Bull arose with difficulty and, instead of going for his enemy again, stood glaring for a moment at the office force looking on, then turned and went out, slamming the door behind him.

Whether Mr. Bull disliked the prospect of another settlement or concluded he had better wait for his money we do not know, but he did not press his claim.

In another week Mr. Hathaway senior returned to his office and resumed his place. He was from that time forward a strong advocate of athletics.

EDWARD S. SPINNEY.

Continued.

A few days ago a new male resident of this city, recently arrived from Ireland, having made a favorable impression upon the manager of a wholesale house on Market street, secured a position. The merchant the next day, having made out a large number of statements, called the new employee into his office, directing him to "go out and post these bills." "Where?" inquired the young man. "Oh, yes," said the business man, "I forgot that you have only been in this country a short time. There's a mail box on the telegraph pole at the corner. Post the bills there." The son of Erin soon returned, laying the bills on the merchant's desk. "I may be a little green yet, sir," said he, "but I'm not posting them bills with a big policeman watching the box." "Not posting them? Why not? What about the policeman?" asked the astonished storekeeper. "That's all right, but you're not fooling me all the same. If it appears to be green. Sure, didn't I see the sign on the pole over the box, 'Post no bills under penalty of the law?'—Philadelphia Record.

The Pure Food Law.

Secretary Wilson says, "One of the objects of the law is to inform the consumer of the presence of certain harmful drugs in medicines." The law requires that the amount of chloroform, opium, morphine, and other habit forming drugs be stated on the label of each bottle. The manufacturers of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy have always claimed that their remedy did not contain any of these drugs, and the truth of this claim is now fully proven, as no mention of them is made on the label. This remedy is not only one of the safest, but one of the best in use for coughs and colds. Its value has been proven beyond question during the many years it has been in general use. For sale by Frank Hart and leading druggists.
